AN EXTRA HELPING . . .

BUILDING BETTER MENTAL HEALTH

HelpGuide
Link: https://www.helpguide.org/articles/mental-health/building-better-mental-health.htm

Looking to boost your mood, handle your emotions better, or build resilience? These 6 life-changing strategies can show you how.

Understanding Good Mental Health

Your mental health influences how you think, feel, and behave in daily life. It also affects your ability to cope with stress, overcome challenges, build relationships, and recover from life's setbacks and hardships.

Strong mental health isn't just the absence of mental health problems. Being mentally or emotionally healthy is much more than being free of depression, anxiety, or other psychological issues. Rather than the absence of mental illness, mental health refers to the presence of positive characteristics.
How to Boost Your Mental Health

There are practices you can adopt to elevate your mood, become more resilient, and enjoy life more. But just as it requires effort to build and maintain physical health, so it is with mental health. We have to work harder these days to ensure strong mental health, simply because there are so many ways that life takes a toll on our emotional well-being.

- Make social connection a priority - especially face-to-face
- Staying active is as good for the brain as it is for the body
- Learn how to keep your stress levels in check
- Eat a brain-healthy diet to support mental health
- Don't skimp on sleep-it matters more than you think
- Find purpose and meaning in life
- When to seek professional help

NEWSWORTHY

COVID-19: THE MENTAL HEALTH IMPACT ON PEOPLE OF COLOR AND MINORITY GROUPS

Medical News Today (Summary by SPRC)

Racial and ethnic minorities may be disproportionately affected by the COVID-19 pandemic. Federal data suggest people from diverse backgrounds are more likely to be considered "essential workers," which places them at higher risk for virus exposure. Reduced access to health care in this population may prevent them from getting the help they need, while higher rates of post-traumatic stress disorder may raise their risk of mental health issues. Other factors that may impact the well-being of racial and ethnic minorities include discrimination, socioeconomic inequality, and language barriers. Listening to the needs of minority populations and providing them with culturally competent mental health care is critical, said Margarita Alegría, chief of the Massachusetts General Hospital Disparities Research Unit. She recommended communities set up local crisis services and train community health workers to offer mental health and substance abuse treatment to people in their native language.

The Federal Communications Commission will formally designate next month a new three-digit number to reach the National Suicide Prevention Hotline. Currently, the hotline is accessible by the 10-digit number, 1-800-273-8255 (TALK). The FCC will vote at its July 16 open meeting to make 9-8-8 the number an individual seeking help can dial and be connected to the hotline. All telecommunications carriers, and VoIP service providers, will be required to implement the new number nationwide by July 16, 2022. Even after 988 is implemented, callers will still be able to reach the hotline through the original 10-digit number.

There has been a significant jump in the rate of suicide among African American youth. These latest findings reinforce the need for more extensive research into the contributing factors along with greater investment in suicide prevention and intervention strategies that are tailored to the needs of black children and teens.

During this webinar the facilitators will:

- Describe the changing epidemiological trends of suicide in African American youth using Youth Risk Behavior Survey (YRBS) data and other data sources
- List risk and protective factors for suicide in African American youth
- Identify potential interventions that may reduce suicide in African American youth

This webinar is designed for Behavioral Health Professionals, Clinicians, Health Equity Leaders, Family and Youth Engagement Advocates.

PREVENTING SUICIDE AMONG MEN IN THE MIDDLE YEARS: RECOMMENDATIONS FOR SUICIDE PREVENTION PROGRAMS: Although men in the middle years (MIMY)—that is, men 35–64 years of age—represent 19 percent of the population of the United States, they account for 40 percent of the suicides in this country. The number of men in this age group and their relative representation in the U.S. population are both increasing. If the suicide rate among men ages 35–64 is not reduced, both the number of men in the middle years who die by suicide and their contribution to the overall suicide rate in the United States will continue to increase.

This free/downloadable publication was created to help state and community suicide prevention programs design and implement projects to prevent suicide among men in the middle years (ages 35–64). It includes a review of the research, recommendations that provide guidance for state and community suicide prevention programs on addressing suicide in this population, and an annotated list of programs and resources.

MAN THERAPY: Working aged men (25-54 years old) account for the largest number of suicide deaths in the U.S. These men are also the least likely to receive any kind of support. They don't talk about it with their friends. They don't share with their family. And they sure as heck don't seek professional treatment. They are the victims of problematic thinking that says mental health disorders are unmanly signs of weakness.

In a very humorous approach, Dr. Rich Mahogany is dedicated to changing these statistics. Part of a multi-agency effort, including the Colorado Office of Suicide Prevention and Cactus, Man Therapy® is giving men a resource they desperately need. A resource to help them with any problem that life sends their way, something to set them straight on the realities of suicide and mental health, and in the end, a tool to help put a stop to the suicide deaths of so many of our men.above.
